

With a Modern Languages degree from the University of Exeter, you'll be able to:

- read, speak, write and understand one or more foreign languages
- adapt quickly to new cultures and demonstrate considerable cultural awareness
- analyse and critically examine diverse forms of verbal and text-based communication
- gather, sift, interpret and organise substantial quantities of diverse information in structured ways
- exercise independent thought and judgement in handling information and arguments in a critical and self-reflective manner
- work with others through the presentation of ideas and information and the collective negotiation of solutions

Where can your degree take you?

Skills, expertise and knowledge gained via a Modern Languages degree are important if you want to pursue a career in translation, interpreting, and language teaching. Employers are always keen on graduates with experience of other cultures gleaned through studying abroad.

A degree in Modern Languages will also equip you with skills that will allow you to move into other areas of employment.

Here is a snapshot of the jobs, employers, and further study programmes that our recent Modern Languages students have progressed to soon after graduation.
