

PJMH

This year's Postgraduate Journal of Medical Humanities includes a broad range of interesting research that builds upon the international and interdisciplinary foundations set by the inaugural edition. We're thrilled to be able to present a journal that includes contributions from researchers working in a broad range of fields, including literature, sociology and media studies.

Bringing this journal together would not have been possible without the hard work of the internal review team, as well as the kind and constructive feedback of external reviewers. We'd like to thank them for their contribution to what we think is an excellent edition, undoubtedly enriched by their willingness to dedicate time and expertise to the project. We must also thank the contributing authors themselves; we're grateful to be able to share your exciting new research through the PJMH.

The journal continues to grow and expand, and we are looking forward to the next edition which will be published in association with the Society for the Social History of Medicine, featuring papers by delegates of the 'Health History in Action' Postgraduate Conference.

Hannah Charnock and Sarah Jones

Editors