

ORE deposit licence

Why is a licence required?

Open Research Exeter (“ORE”), on behalf of the University of Exeter (“the University”), supports the long-term preservation of research outputs produced by staff and students of the University of Exeter.

In order for the University, via ORE, to reproduce, re-format, and disseminate your submission worldwide, your agreement to the following terms is necessary. Please take a moment to read the terms of this licence in respect of your submission, being material that you submit to ORE including but not limited to a journal article, dataset, thesis, and/or corresponding metadata. By depositing your submission and ticking the box at the end of this licence, you agree to the terms of the licence.

Licence terms

You, as the author(s) or copyright owner, grant to the University the non-exclusive royalty-free irrevocable right to store, reproduce, re-format, preserve and/or disseminate your submission (including the abstract) worldwide in print and electronic format and in any medium.

You also understand and agree that:

- The University may, without changing the content, migrate the submission to any medium or format for the purpose of distribution, storage and preservation. You also agree that the University may keep more than one copy of this submission for purposes of security, back-up and preservation.
- The University will make the metadata in respect of your submission openly available without restriction under Creative Commons licence CC 0 – this means that you waive any interests in any metadata that you create in respect of your submission, and place them in the public domain, so that others may freely build upon, enhance and reuse the metadata for any purposes without restriction under copyright or database law.
- Except for metadata and embargoed items within your submission, the University may communicate, make available, publish, distribute and make your submission available to third party end users in accordance with the University’s Open Access Research and Research Data Management Policy, either under the terms of an end-user licence you have chosen at the time of the deposit, or if you have not chosen a licence, under a Creative Commons CC BY licence.

In respect of the content of your submission, you warrant and represent that:

- The submission is your original work, and that you have the right to grant the rights contained in this licence;
- Your submission does not, to the best of your knowledge, infringe the copyright or other proprietary rights (such as confidential information) of a third party;
- If the submission contains such third party material, you have obtained the unrestricted permission of the owner to grant the University the rights required by this licence, and that such third-party owned material is clearly identified and acknowledged within the text or content of your submission;

- Your submission does not contain anything which is obscene, libellous, defamatory, harassing, offensive or malicious;
- Where relevant, your submission does not and could not enable the identification of a living individual who has participated in the research project described in your submission and that you have obtained all required ethical consents and governance approvals;
- If the submission is based upon work that has been sponsored or supported in any way by an individual, company or any other organisation other than the University, you represent that you have fulfilled any right of review or other contractual obligations that have been agreed with such individual, company or organisation.

You confirm that you have checked your submission prior to deposit for ethical, legal, and intellectual property right compliance.

The University will clearly identify you by name as the author(s) or owner(s) of the submission, and will not make any alteration, other than as allowed by this licence, to your submission.

A person who is not the author/copyright owner but who has been given authorisation by the author/copyright owner may on his/her behalf deposit your submission in ORE. Before the proxy depositor deposits your submission to ORE, you, as author/copyright owner should confirm that your submission complies with these licence terms because you remain responsible for complying with them.

Disclaimer

The University accepts no responsibility for mistakes, omissions, or alleged or actual third party infringements contained in a submission, and is under no obligation to take any legal action. While every care will be taken to preserve the submission for the long term, the University is not liable to you for loss or damage to the submission or any other data while it is stored in ORE, or any repository to which the submission is subsequently migrated.

You understand the University may remove your submission without notice for professional, legal or administrative reasons. This licence is governed by, and construed in accordance with, English Law and the exclusive jurisdiction of the English courts as regards any claim or matter arising in relation to it.
